Jackie the joke man Martling

Interview by Chaunce Hayden

Known for his trademark high-pitched laugh and ability to tell jokes, Jackie "The Joke Man" Martling will more than likely forever be remembered for walking away from the greatest job in showbiz...writing jokes for Howard Stern.

For over two decades Martling, 56, sat beside the King of All Media and not only wrote one-liners, the now-infamous joke teller also helped create a unique chemistry that set the standard for morning talk radio. The unmatched success of The Howard Stern Show propelled Martling's career as a stand-up comic to enormous heights. Not surprisingly, Martling's popularity with Stern fans guaranteed sellout performances in comedy clubs all around the country and spawned jokeland.com. The Web site became a lucrative vehicle for Martling to sell self-promoting merchandise such as coffee cups, t-shirts, joke books, and videos, just to name a few.

A dream home on Long Island, a beautiful wife (singer/actress Nancy Sirianni), a lucrative salary, and millions of fans, Martling seemed to have it all. But in 2001, it all came to a shocking end.

Martling, unhappy with his contract, decided to walk off the show. The gutsy protest proved to be a devastating career move when, after several weeks of tense negotations, Howard Stern decided to audition other comics to sit in Jackie's chair. Over time, Martling was replaced by actor and comedian Artie Lange and Jackie's role on The Howard Stern Show was over for good.

Stunned fans have since grown accepting of Lange. However, nobody who's ever listened to The Howard Stern Show will ever forget Martling's contribution.

Since his departure, Martling has divorced from his wife and has spent his time performing stand-up, acting, and creating a gadget called the "Talking JokeMaster" (a little talking box that tells kid jokes).

Suprisingly, Martling has chosen to remain quiet about his feelings on the events that led to his untimely departure ... Until now.

After years of friendly stalking, I was finally able to persuade Jackie to answer some probing questions sent to him via e-mail at his request. The following are his replies.

Wow, we're knee deep in summer already and before the season got completely away from me I wanted to make it down to the very popular Whiskey Cafe Saturday Car & Bike Show. It seems I've had plans every Saturday this summer but at long last I finally quenched my thirst for horsepower and classic auto/bike stylings. Just look at this rooftop shot! Over 500 cars were on display the day I was there and the weather could not have been better. Even if you're not into hotrods or bikes this is still a great Saturday evening hang. Call 201.939.4889 for more Whiskey info.

Over in Morristown, NJ Jimmy's is jamming with their outdoor patio in full operation. I dropped in for some dinner recently and got to watch first hand how a newby bartender is trained. Here is (pictured l to r) Alison and Jenn. Alison was showing Jenn the ropes of drink slingin' as a thirsty happy hour crowd ordered up cocktail after cocktail. Check out www.jimmyshaunt.com for more info on this Morris County hotspot. Rumor has it they will be hosting lots of bands this Fall...

Speaking of rumors, they are indeed true when it comes to Tequila Joe's. TeJo's will be reopening on Friday September 10th. You can expect the same madness that their old days were famous for however if I know Joe, he'll reface the place with a fresh look. I'll of course be back to check it out once the doors open up. There are just too many old ghosts to revisit from my Studio 1 days. Come to think of it there are plenty of ghosts from my Tequila days too. Gotta make sure I say what's up to them as well! Ghosts can be kinda sensitive with that stuff.

I checked out Jefferson Starship a few weeks ago when they played The Blues Cruise which takes place every Wednesday through the summer on the Circle Line. Each week there is a different artist jamming waveside and this night was one of the more interesting of the bunch. They played tons of great stuff from their early days recreating a scene that must have been what it was like back in the sixties. There were people with Volunteers of America shirts on and a real liberal, hippie vibe permeated the boat. The faint scent of skunk was also present but no one could figure out where that was coming from... :) Here's a picture of the band jamming away. Also pictured is Rocco who you may recognize from his days at Screwy Louie's in Kearny, NJ. Here he is pointing to the girl who started it all-the lovely Lady Liberty.

By Dan Lorenzo

In this column I will end all suicide bombings by Muslim extremists. We must first get to the crux of the problem. Why would any man kill himself? Would a man kill himself today if he knew he would be getting sex from a hot woman tomorrow? Of course not! Only a guy who was a serious loser with the ladies would kill himself. These pathetic rejects believe if they kill themselves they'll deflower 70 virgins in the afterlife. First off, what real man could put up with a virgin anyway? I've only been asked twice by girls to take their virginity. I rejected the request both times. Who wants to hear, 70 times "I'm not sure if I'm ready" or "maybe we should wait". Even if the suicide bombers get sex in the afterlife, now they gotta hear "I missed my period" 70 times! So Mr. Pathetic suicide bomber, here's how you get laid by 70 girls in the "real" world. 1) Join a band that goes on tour for 60 days 2) Become a roadie for a band that goes on tour for 60 days 3) Tell a hundred girls at the local mall that you're in a band, even if you're not.

I've seen both Pam Anderson homemade pornos with two different men. From what I could tell neither one of them were suicide bombers. I understand your wacky ways, sort of. Anytime I went two weeks or so without a girl I felt like flying a plane into a building. I never would kill innocent people though. First I was young and cute before I was 22 and a lot of girls liked me. Then I got old and ugly. I had to learn something the uglier I got. You can't be like psychotic construction workers and just make lame catcalls at hot chicks. You have to be the guy who has the balls to walk up to them. What is the freaking worst thing that can happen? You'll feel stupid if they reject your advances? Get over it!

Any guy not getting any action for more than a couple of weeks is pathetic. You want 70 women in the next 2 months? It's easy, I guarantee you can do it. Ask out 700. You're not that good looking? Ask out 7,000…or join a band.■

MORSELS

RULES OF ENGAGEMENT

A friend of mine recently confided in me that he was thinking of marrying his long-time girlfriend. I, of course, felt he needed some patented Mike Morse advice.

"Marriage is not something to enter into lightly," I said. "Unless you're Larry King. Or Britney Spears. Or Jennifer Lopez. But you get the idea."

But if he was determined to pop the question, I wanted to make sure that he did it right. A bad proposal can set the mood for a bad wedding. And a bad wedding can set the mood for a bad honeymoon. And a bad honeymoon can set the mood for a bad marriage. And a bad marriage can set the mood for a bad divorce. And a bad divorce means that a guy is going to lose half his bank account and be forced to eat Kraft macaroni-and-cheese made on a tiny hot plate every night while sitting in his 12 x 12 studio apartment. Since my friend hates macaroni-and-cheese, I figured I had to make sure his proposal would be a success.

So I gave him some simple rules to follow that would keep his fiancé happy and keep him macaroni-and-cheeseless.

1. If you get down on one knee to propose, be sure that it isn't because you're too drunk to stand.

2. Make sure that the stone in her ring isn't the kind that changes color with her mood.

3. A romantic pre-engagement dinner never includes the phrase, "Do you want fries with that?"

4. When waiting for her response to your proposal, don't blurt out, "Make it snappy, honey. The second half is about to start and I've got a lot of dough riding on this game!"

5. No matter how desperate you make think your girlfriend is to get married, do not dangle the ring over her head and taunt, "Come on, jump for it, you know you want it."

6. A proposal in pig Latin, although funny, is decidedly unromantic.

7. Regardless of how much it costs, a diamond ring does not nullify a restraining order.

8. Putting the ring down the front of your pants and asking your soon-to-be-betrothed to "fish around down there until you find something you like" is not the kind of fairytale engagement story you'll want to tell your grandchildren.

9. Never, ever follow up the phrase "You make my life complete, will you marry me" with "April Fools!"

SOUTH BEACH CHIC...

Last week, we discussed the utter lack of sophisticated style in South Beach. But I failed to mention that there are two stores that are worth a visit, and they only have locations in Miami. My friend Maja and I spotted A. Dominguez one night while we were wandering over to the Rose Bar. Since it was nighttime, the mens and womens boutique was closed, but the windows promised an array of cute duds that looked on the expensive side. We admired the mannequins and promised to visit the store the next day, when it was open. So imagine our pleasant surprise when A. Dominguez not only lived up to our expectations, with a selection of summery tops and sweaters, cute dresses, and smart sandals, but the prices were absolutely inexpensive. My friend purchased two pairs of sandals for less than $150, and I found a pale pink hoodie sweater for $48. The store is part of a Spanish company, and thus far this is their only location in the states, at 100 16th Street, telephone number 305/672-6989.

Last year, I told you about Caterina Lucchi, located at 760 Ocean Drive, which was also a huge step above anything else on offer in South Beach. This Italian designer also has only one outpost in the states, and this is it. Look for great leather goods and clever designs in this tiny boutique: This year I was lucky enough to hit their swimsuit sale, and I snagged an adorable black and white bikini marked down to $75 from $160. You can also check out their website at www.caterinalucchi.com.

SALE ALERT...

Fashionistas all over the Manhattan anxiously await the arrival of the Sigerson Morrison bi-annual shoe sale, and it's on now. Rush over to their location at Prince Street in Nolita to snap up their wonderfully designed summer flats, sandals, and slingbacks at 50% off. That's right, the entire collection is half off, including all the bags in the Sigerson Morrison handbag store on Mott Street around the corner. Hurry hurry girls, because sizes go faster then you can say, "I looooooove these!"

Starting today, DKNY in SoHo is offering an extra 30% off all their mens and womens sale product. That includes their chic selection of 70s inspired swimsuits, linen skirts and pants, sexy halters, fun tees, and their summer shoes. I purchased a pair of snakeskin slingbacks that were originally $560 for $140. Yep, you read that correctly! Check it out, because these bargains will not last long! ■

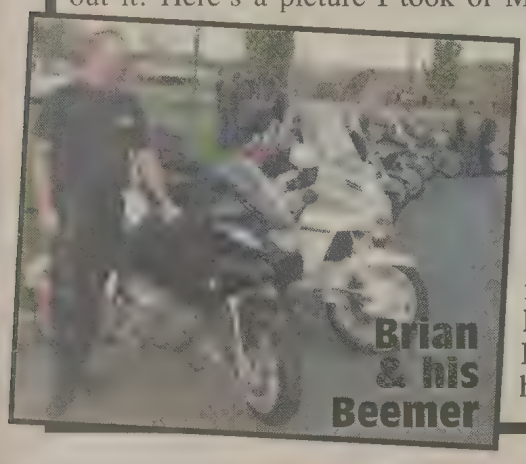
I've got to say that as much as I love working at Steppin' Out it is pretty hard to break away from a weekly deadline to log any real miles. Sure a few hundred here and there on the weekends cuts it for a while but at some point you have to break that thousand mile mark and cover some serious ground. Well, perhaps for you real iron buttheads that's not all that much but hey, I've got to get back to work on Monday ' ya know?! :) Anyway, I and my friends Sam and Mike shot up to NY's Finger Lakes a couple of weekends ago. This was the first leg of a 1,200 mile journey that led us next to Niagra Falls and then on to Toronto. When we awoke in Toronto, Mother Nature had decided to keep us nice and wet for the next day's ride to Watertown, NY. The rain let up around the time we hit The Thousand Islands Parkway which was a sweet non-commercial two laner. Checking out the luxurious private islands and mansions from this vantage point was a trip highlight for sure. As if to say welcome home, the rain stopped as we crossed the border back into the good 'ol U.S.A. Thanks ma! The entie ride was thankfully free of incident and radar snags. (Big ups go out to the Valentine V-1 detector.) The value of good rain gear though was a lesson well reinforced. We would have been soaked without it! Here's a picture I took of Mike and Sam up at Watkins Glen Raceway.

Sam & Mike... Ready to Race



Brian & his Beemer

And now on to some area riders and the HOLESHOTS that I forced them at gunpoint to pose for... First up is Bryan from Blairstown, NJ with his 1999 BMW R1100S. This bike is both gorgeous and sporty. Next up is Rene Bras from Orange County, NY. Rene is pictured with his 2003 Kawasaki Z1000. Can you tell Rene likes chrome? I could barely see what kind of moto this was as I approached due to the glare coming off its tank! I took both of these pictures at The Chatterbox's Thursday Bike Night in Augusta, NJ. This Thursday July 22nd they are hosting the Fastlane Biker Magazine semi-finals so drop by and check out what is sure to be a sick showing of rad rides. Tramontin Harley-Davidson sponsors this night which brings me to this next picture... This is a nitrous-infused rolling barstool that was on display during one of the dealership's recent events. You don't see one of these that often! Lastly, I found these three Yamaha V-Max's at Lyndhurst, NJ's Whiskey Cafe Car & Bike Show. This show takes place every Saturday evening during the summer and draws a phenomenal crowd. (See my coverage in this week's Barfly). I could not locate the owners of these V-Beasts but this particular model moto is so regal it can stand by itself in a photo. Hell, even at a standstill this bike looks intimidating.

Chaunce Hayden: The million-dollar question has to be, "Is there life after Howard Stern?"

Jackie Martling: Chaunce, that's not a million-dollar question. That's a goodbye-millions-of-dollars question. Actually, it's a ridiculous question. Of course life goes on. It goes on after anything short of death. And even after that, if you're Mel Gibson.

We've heard Howard's version of you leaving the show many times. But, as far as I know, you haven't publicly given your side of the story as of yet. Can you shed some light as to what really happened that led to your leaving the show?

I'm so sorry to say there is absolutely no intrigue to the story of me leaving. Infinity Broadcasting offered me a very lucrative five-year deal, but I wanted more money than they were offering.

Is it fair to say you walked away from a seven-figure deal?

Including decimal places? No, it wasn't a seven-figure offer. Was the total for the five-year deal in seven figures? Yes.

Nobody could believe it when you didn't return to the show. What was your thought process at the time? Did you think you would eventually come back?

I was simply holding out for the money I wanted, or closer to it. I was, of course, hoping they'd come back to the table with another counter offer, which they never did.

Were you mentally and emotionally prepared to leave for good?

Was I mentally prepared to be off the show for good? More prepared than I was for these questions, Chaunce.

Looking back, now that the smoke has cleared, do you feel betrayed by anyone associated with The Howard Stern Show? Robin Quivers seems to be the loudest voice when it comes to sharing her feelings.

No, I never felt any sense of betrayal by any of them. Maybe that's a bit naive, who knows? It's how I choose to feel. We were all very close ... or at least went through a lot together ... for a long, long time. Since I don't listen to the show, I only know what I hear from whoever, and I always take it with a grain of salt, which, as you know, is very little salt.

Do you wish Howard would have done more to bring you back to the show?

Sometimes yes, sometimes no.

Did Howard call you during your holdout? If so, can you tell me how the conversation went?

No, he never called.

When did you first realize you weren't ever going to be back on the show? And did you feel depressed? Relieved? Scared? Excited? Or all of the above?

I'm not coming back? I realized I was off the show for good just before I got your e-mail with these questions. And it cured my diarrhea.

If this is too personal I understand, but it's on the minds of fans. Rumors of your long marriage to Nancy coming to an end shortly after leaving the show have shown up all over the Internet. Did the stress of leaving the show have anything to do with your marriage ending?

No.

Have other radio shows come knocking? Would you work for a competing radio show?

Did they come knocking? Chaunce, I'm a wealthy man. I have a doorbell. It plays "The March of the Gladiators," my calliope circus music from the show, and it always confuses me, because it makes me think Fred Norris is in my kitchen. And there's nothing scarier than thinking that Fred Norris is in your kitchen, except for maybe Fred Norris actually being in your kitchen.

You helped with the creation of ABC TV's "Am I Hot?" The show was created by former Stern E! Show producer, Scott Einziger. Was ABC wrong for airing "Am I Hot?" because of the similarities to a bit Howard Stern regularly featured on his radio show?

"Luckily there are no 'typical days' to my life. That would make me batty. And who's happy? Are you? Chaunce, it's been twenty years ... step out already."

Your initial statement is incorrect, though everyone assumed as much. I wasn't in on the creation of that show. I was flown out to punch up the judges' comments on the fly during the tapings of "Am I Hot?," which I never got to do because there was no way logistically to get ideas to them, except for what we gave them before the show. The show had not only already been created, but they had already begun taping before I got the call to come out to L.A.

Did you think Howard would react the way he did about the show and file a lawsuit?

Was I surprised at Howard's reaction? After all the years in the foxhole with him, I'm never surprised at the way he reacts to anything. I will say he's very often unpredictable. That's his genius.

Howard brought in other comics to sit in your chair during your walk out. Did you have a personal favorite?

I've never listened, so I have no answer. I will say that my old pal Ron Zimmerman is a very, very funny guy, and I know he sat in a bunch of times, so I'm sure he was great.

(Follow up question via Email) You never listen to the show?

Am I able? Yes, I have a radio and my hearing is fine. But no.

How would you describe your life these days? Can you give an example of a typical day? Are you happy?

Luckily there are no "typical days" to my life. That would make me batty. And who's happy? Are you? Chaunce, it's been twenty years ... step out already. My life does include much more sleep than it used to. My stand-up is wall-to-wall dirty jokes, the same as it's been for twenty-five years! It currently begins with a little more than an hour of the very best jokes I know, after accumulating them for over fifty years. (Some of them get laughs.) And then we play "Stump the Joke Man," which is still a hoot every time.

During your years on Stern, did you ever do anything that you regret when you look back on it now?

No. Everything I and we did on the show was funny and real ... who could regret that? Luckily the hockey players I see at golf outings don't remember me pooping in The Stanley Cup.

Did you ever go home and feel uncomfortable about a particular show?

No, of course not. We were just trying to be fun to listen to. It was that simple.

What was your greatest moment on the show?

My stellar moment was saying, "Get out of the way and I'll show you how it's done, Howard," and then throwing a piece of baloney and having it cling to the contours of the target girl's asscrack. Of course, there are countless other hysterical moments, many of which you may not be aware of. I may very well finally write a book, and when I do, I don't want it to be old news. I'm of course hoping that even the stuff that went on while you were listening will be funny when I relate my version of the goings-on. So stay tuned ...

What projects are you working on now? Do you need to work, or could you comfortably retire if you chose to do so?

I've currently got seven electronic joke products that I created with Excalibur Electronics in stores internationally, and they're doing very well. This Christmas is going to be huge for us. Judging from the trends of sales so far, just the Talking JokeMaster Jr. 1 and the Talking JokeMaster Jr. 2 are a lock to sell in the hundreds of thousands. Kids go nuts for them ... simple little boxes that play kids' jokes. It's such a great story, to have accumulated dirty jokes for over fifty years, and then make my next score with the first jokes I ever heard, back in 1953. I'm also trying my hand at acting, and hanging around the independent movie scene a lot. It's great fun,

HOT WAX

By Jamye

They say age is only a number, and you're only as old as you feel, and it's important to stay young in spirit and grow wise in mind – okay, I made up that last part, but doesn't it sound good? While this is generally valuable advice, when you are attending a foreign University with students who have yet to receive their bachelor's degrees, age isn't only a number; it's also an issue.

Girls mature faster than boys do, and therefore, I have met a number of really fantabulous (another made up word) females between the ages of 18 and 27. We go out every night, drink, laugh and stay up until the sun starts peaking through the clouds. However, when it comes to American boys, I have yet to do any of those same things. For almost every straight, American boy I've met under the age of 23, all I see is a baby. It's not that 23 is young, because I know it depends on circumstances and experiences, and I don't think that young boys who can't remember when Reagan was shot, one of my most vivid first grade memories, are necessarily bad things, but most of the 23 year old American males I've met are short on life experience. And that makes it hard to connect, and even harder to want to do more than connect, if you know what I mean.

I keep asking myself if being young and nubile really matters if you have nothing in common. I find it hard to talk about my favorite TV show, since it was probably cancelled before they could read, or how my mother still makes my bed on summer vacations, because she doesn't and I don't have summer vacations, and although they have something to offer to someone, somehow what their offer isn't what I'm looking for.

Before you call me an ageist, let me explain myself further. I've met other 23 year-old boys here, four of them that are smart, sexy and Dutch, and these boys act older than their age, and younger than mine, which is not necessarily a bad thing. They're all open and attractive, cute and fun, explorers and intellectuals. What I am trying to say is that screwing around with a 23 year old wouldn't be such a bad thing, if it weren't an American boy. Because European men age faster than Americans do, and I think it has everything to do with their sex education, and how they aren't taught abstinence only in high school.

So in my quest to get "some" in Prague, I am learning a lot about age. While I've never acted or felt like what these people perceive a 29 year-old should be, which is married and mommy, I've never understood how others might perceive me outside of New York, and now I know. And what I've learned as I explore life in Prague, is that while age is only a number, sometimes it's so much more than that. ■

Gossip Girl

BY Coleen Christian

HOLLYWOOD WILL NEVER BE THE SAME...

Queer Eye for the Straight Girl

Gossip Girl wished and wished, and finally Queer Eye for the Straight Girl is headed for our TV screens. The cast is almost complete, but a decision has yet to be made for the Lifestyle position. But don't worry, the Lifestyle spot has been narrowed down to two candidates and the selection will be made soon. Start turning in your girlfriends…now, there's no need for anyone to look bad.

Queer Eye for the Straight Guy

Meanwhile, the original Fab Five are busy planning a wedding for one of their producer pals who works on the show. It will be held at Carson's farm outside of Philadelphia. The boys had their hearts set on an early September wedding…and one of them even chose a date…September 11th! The Bride balked and the date was quickly changed. Those boys have it all…except for a little common sense.

Martha's Last Meal

The thought of prison time has made Martha Stewart very hungry, and home cooked meals are not on the menu. Gossip Girl's much maligned Martha has been spotted chowing down at the trendy Spice Market in New York's Meat Packing District and the very conservative Four Season's. And this won't be the end of her dining out. Gossip Girl bets Martha will hit every restaurant in the big city before she heads to the big house.

Almost Famous

Claire Danes and Almost Famous boyfriend Billy Crudup waiting on the sidewalk, just like everybody else, to get into Lupa in the West Village. The couple, who claims they're not an item, waited on the street before heading inside the rustic Italian restaurant. So did they get the best table in the house? Not by a long shot. Claire and Billy settled for two seats at the bar. Its nice to see celebs behaving like the rest of us.

Fear Factor Times Square

They factored in the fear, but not the rain. Fear Factor came to Times Square last week, but production was scared off by a little rain. Okay, it was a lot of rain and Joe Rogan and the gang were just delayed…but that didn't stop the crowd from gawking, even thought there was nothing going on! ■ it's incredibly creative on every level, and more importantly, I want to be there to hear the news if one of the many films I've done ever gets finished. Actually, a film I have a tiny role in is renting now, and it's great. It's "Anne B. Real," which was directed by my pal Lisa France (her first feature), and has won many awards at the countless independent film festivals around the world. Please go have a look. I also have a decent role -- I play a successful television comedian who has his own sitcom, so it's a stretch -- in Tom Ellis' new film, called "joke bitch," and it's going to take the festivals by storm. Did I mention that it's going to take the festivals by storm? I still do stand-up, because after a month or so of not performing, a comedian starts to twitch. I have a show at The Stress Factory in New Brunswick, New Jersey, on Thursday, July 29th, and I'm working at The Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas August 13th-15th. Hopefully interestingly, Steve Schirripa, the guy who first booked me at The Riviera, who's now a dear old friend, plays Bobby Bacala, Uncle Junior's right-hand man, on "The Sopranos."

Would you ever consider writing a book about your life? Without question, it would be a bestseller among Stern fans.

Of course I'll write a book. Probably sooner rather than later.

Will it be a tell-all?

Will it be scathing? No. I have nothing scathing to write. Will it be funny? It'll be a killer, I promise you. Will it be 100% my life and times on The Howard Stern Show? Of course not. Not when you're an egomaniac like me who thinks he has funny tales to tell about many other aspects of his life's adventures.

How would you like to be remembered by the millions of fans who enjoyed your work on The Howard Stern Show for so many years?

"He's a good guy."

Finally, would you come on the show as a guest?

Sure I'd go on as a guest. When I have something I want to talk about, which will be pretty soon. I'm working on something right now that I'm hoping I can announce on The Stern Show in a couple of months, if he'll have me.

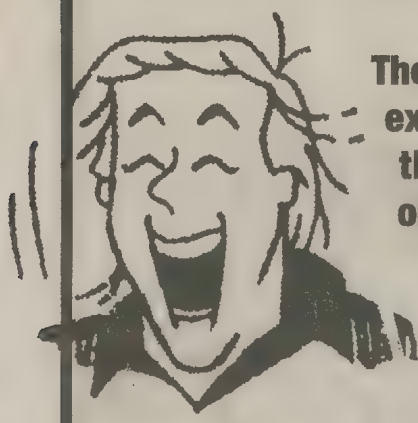
...JACKIE MARTLING ON APPEARING ON THE HOWARD STERN SHOW

Steppin' Out

EXCLUSIVE!



The following is an exclusive teaser to the book that everyone assumes Jackie has been writing for the past 15 years.

From Jackie: I'd appreciate it if your readers ... my friends and fans ... would drop me some feedback on the following story and the idea of serializing the book at jackie@jokeland.com.

Snatch!

Starting in February of 1983, I had been appearing on "The Howard Stern Show" on WNBC-AM every Tuesday afternoon when I wasn't out on the road doing stand-up. The show was from 4 p.m. until 8 p.m., and I'd sit in from about 5 until the end, playing "Stump the Comedian" and joining in whatever else was on the agenda.

Back then, I'd bring in the dirtiest and most offensive two-line jokes we could get away with for Fred Norris to call in as a Jewish grandmother (Mrs. Phlemstein) to play "Stump," and a few pages of insults in case Howard wanted to have rank-out contests with the listeners. That was the extent of my writing for the show.Sometimes Al Rosenberg sat in as Lou Ferrigno, the deaf body builder/actor who played "The Hulk." Al is a scream, and his Lou impression was hysterical. He'd hear things wrong, and react to them, and it was always funny. One day it was after 7 p.m., and we were going to have to stop early because there was a Knicks game coming on WNBC. Howard was reading a Coca-Cola ad ... that's how long ago it was, we still had mainstream advertisers like Coca-Cola ... and he said, "... so always make sure you have plenty of Coca-Cola and snacks on hand for the game."

I heard him says "snacks," and thought of Lou hearing it wrong. I wrote down on a scrap of paper "snacks ... snatch," and put it down on the console in front of Al, who was sitting next to me.

He looked at it, and immediately mumbled in his Lou voice, "What did you say, Howard?"

Howard said, "What was that, Lou?"

Al said, "Make sure you have lots of Coca-Cola and what?"

Howard said, "Make sure you have lots of Coca-Cola and snacks."

Al said, "Boy, you're dirty, Howard."

Catching on immediately, of course, Howard said, "I said 'snacks,' Lou."

Al said, "See? You're disgusting, Howard."

By now we were all howling. It was perfect comedy. All I could think of was the tens of thousands of guys who weren't even fans of the show yet, who were already tuned in to WNBC to hear the game, and were hearing this wildly funny and filthy interchange.

As best I can recall, that was the first time that I passed a note and started something like that. What it generated was so great that I must have been inspired to pass more notes.

I have no idea to this day whether Howard or Robin or Fred or anybody even knew that I keyed Al into that. But it didn't matter, just like it went on to never matter ... we were all just trying to do a funny, funny show, with everybody doing all that they could. Whatever you could throw into the mix, you did.

...End

MC5 returns in a revamped version ... older, wiser and stronger

Few rock bands have burned as brightly, flamed out as tragically, or made such an improbable return from death and decay as Detroit's MC5.

The pioneering group's hyperactive fusion of proto-punk ferocity, heavy-metal thunder, avant-jazz daring and radical politics in the late '60s and early '70s later inspired everyone from the Ramones and Rage Against the Machine to the Sex Pistols and the Hives.

"All our record company wanted us to do was sell records - we wanted to change the world," said lead guitarist Wayne Kramer, who is now on tour with his revamped band, known as DKT/MC5.

"I think the business interests in those days saw the MC5 as a way to make money," he continued, "just as Epic Records saw Rage Against the Machine as way to make money in the '90s."

The MC5 never made much money before it imploded in late 1972, the victim of corporate censorship, police and FBI harassment, intra-group acrimony and a debilitating appetite for destruction that included cocaine and heroin.

At least two of the band's members later served prison sentences after being convicted on drug-related charges. Former MC5 singer Rob Tyner died of a heart attack in 1991, while guitarist Fred "Sonic" Smith (who married punk avatar Patti Smith in 1980) died of heart failure in 1994.

"I've been thinking about Rob a lot, and how he would've enjoyed his day in the sun on this tour. And I think Fred would be proud," original MC5 bassist Michael Davis said from a recent Arizona concert stop.

"We still have our chops and can still play. But we miss those guys, and it's kind of bittersweet that they can't be along for the ride."

For this tour, Tyner and Smith's roles are being filled by the unlikely triumvirate of Marshall Crenshaw, Mudhoney's Mark Arm and ex-Lemonhead Evan Dando.

"The MC5's song catalog, their legacy, has survived this long for a good reason - they were one of the great rock bands of all time," said fellow Detroit native Crenshaw, who was 13 when he saw the band open a show for Jimi Hendrix.

"They were spearheads of the counterculture and a focal point of the (radical) movement. But they were also fun and had this crazy, wild sense of humor. I could see that from the start, that they were lunatics and joyful spirits. ... Now I realize they worshipped black culture as much as they were grabbing stuff from the Who and Yardbirds."

The MC5's incendiary debut album, 1969's "Kick Out the Jams," was the group's most successful, even though it only rose to No. 30 on the national Billboard charts.

But in terms of importance and its influence on subsequent generations of fans and musicians, the short-lived MC5 still ranks alongside such epic cult bands as New York's Velvet Underground and Germany's Can. Witness the members of such bands as Cheap Trick, Primal Scream and the Melvins, who all sing the group's praises in the acclaimed film documentary, "MC5: A True Testimonial," which was released July 6 on DVD.

"It's an incredibly nice feeling to know we've had such an affect and that it's lasted," bassist Davis said.

At least two of the band's members later served prison sentences after being convicted on drug-related charges.

He, Kramer and original MC5 drummer Dennis Thompson are in their mid-50s now. None of them anticipated their film documentary-fueled reunion tour, which features songs from all three MC5 albums, or that it would grow from a handful of American gigs into a worldwide trek that will also visit Europe and Asia.

"I'm a much better player today; I know what I'm doing," Kramer said, en route from Los Angeles to San Francisco. "I know how this music works - what notes work in what sequences and what the passing tones are - so I can enjoy it more as a musician. I can also stretch the boundaries further, because my vocabulary is a little broader.

"It's interesting, because music is marketed as something that's all about youth, and it's not. You can continue to grow in your craft, stretch out more in your ideas and their application, maintain your passion for art and life, and actually improve."

The documentary gives a good, if incomplete, overview of the band, once considered such a threat that it was under regular surveillance by the FBI.

"For a time, the positive unification we were involved with of people against the (Vietnam) war and against oppression was great," Davis said. "Then I think the authorities took a look at us and thought we were trying to overthrow the system.

"In some aspects, we were. But we basically wanted people to feel good and happy. The original thought is what counts, so never give up on it. Even when you think it's over, it may not be."

THE CURE
"The Cure"

Twenty-five years since their debut, the band's influence is all over the place, from Hot Hot Heat's fevered thrum to The Rapture's spectral dilation. But it's been close to 15 years since their last truly great album.

For the first time ever, Smith isn't in charge of production. Ross Robinson, who's worked with Slipknot, Korn and At The Drive-In, drove the band to near-mutiny in his search for the ultimate performance. And it shows. It is startling from the first listen. Opening with the brooding dirge of "Lost", the band are heavier, more menacing, more rhythmic than ever. "Labyrinth" barely lifts the mood, its deep blue psychedelic heart carrying Smith's tortured performance. The Cure haven't sounded this malevolent since "Pornography" and Robinson is intent on not allowing Smith's melodic side to throw easy pop bait over the side of his sleek, black destroyer. When the classic Cure moments come and "Taking Off", "Before Three" and "The End Of The World" are up there with the best they're still heavy, still focused on moving The Cure forward if, at the same time, Smith's lyrics are as unguarded and romantic as ever.

"I Don't Know What's Going On" finds Smith scat-singing his way to a falsetto chorus, "Anniversary" has a Moroder-ish disco tint and an operatic chorus. "Alt.end"

Smith has said of this record, "If you don't like this, you don't like us," and when you give your album the same name as your band, you need to be sure you can stand by every moment. They can, and they undoubtedly will.

"The Cure" is not an easy album to love. It's oppressive and relentless at times, it never, not once, lets you off the hook without a fight. But it shows a band on the verge of a whole new future. Whether they actually want it or not is a lot less clear.■

Hilary Duff

Once or twice a year a new star bursts on the scene, streaking across the sky in a blaze of magazine covers and clever cross-promotion, becoming forever part of our cultural consciousness. It is happening right now with Hilary Duff, the sweet 16-year-old star of "A Cinderella Story."

If you are saying "Who?" you obviously were not watching a few years ago when Duff launched the Disney Channel television show "Lizzie McGuire" to the top of its time slot. And you did not catch the second wave of publicity surrounding Duff's two films last year, "Agent Cody Banks" and "The Lizzie McGuire Movie." As if that were not enough, the pretty Texan also has sold millions of pop-rock albums, and her music videos are on MTV.

So for the starlet who was first discovered performing ballet as a little girl, the lead role in "A Cinderella Story" is a natural. A comical modern retelling of the classic fairy tale, "A Cinderella Story" is a high school romance that casts Duff as a mousy teenager with a domineering stepmother played by Jennifer Coolidge.

Q: Are you a big fan of the "Cinderella" fairy tale?

A: Definitely. When I was growing up, "Cinderella" was my favorite fairy tale. Every little girl wants that to happen to her.

Q: Did you like how this movie shows a different type of Cinderella?

A: That's what I love about it, is that it shows the girl being independent. In all the other Cinderella stories she kind of sat around and waited for things to fall into place. In this one, even though she's not the most popular girl in school, she's still a go-getter and she sets goals for herself.

Q: Jennifer Coolidge is very funny as your stepmom in the film. Was it hard to keep a straight face when she improvised her lines?

A: Not just me. Everyone would just bust out laughing. I loved her, but it was hard because it was like, "Hilary, you have to get it together!" All of the stuff she said was never written. She just made it all up. I was thinking, "How does she come up with this kind of stuff?" She's so creative. She's great.

Q: Do you feel more like yourself when you act or when you sing onstage?

A: I'm not sure. Definitely when I'm onstage, I'm a different person and I feel more in touch with myself and who I want to be. It's definitely a little more hardcore than the movies I do or how I dress on a daily basis. When I'm singing, I am putting on a persona. I'm not, like, out there and crazy on a day-to-day basis. But that's me, that's what I feel inside and what I feel most connected with. It's kind of fun and I can let loose. They're all me, different personalities.

Q: So which is your true passion, acting or singing?

A: Definitely singing. When you're onstage and you have a sold-out venue of 15,000 people, and they know every single word to your song and are holding up gigantic signs and freaking out, the support and energy you get from them, it's like instant gratification. It's such a cool feeling to be in a different city every night. It's great. The singing definitely gives you more energy. But it's also a very rewarding feeling when you've finished a movie.

Q: Is it hard to meet people because you are a celebrity?

A: I think so, yeah. It's so hard for me. Even though I'm 16, I don't feel like 16 most of the time. But also, I work so much and I'm always out of town, so where am I supposed to meet somebody if it's not in the business? How am I supposed to meet anybody normal? I don't go to a high school. And if I do meet someone normal, then everyone starts talking about it, if it's right or wrong. So there are so many different opinions involved.

Q: So where would you find a boyfriend?

A: Right now, I don't. I think my boyfriend is my work and my car, and that's it for now.

Q: What kind of car is it?

A: I drive a Range Rover.

Q: Stick shift?

A: Oh, are you kidding me? It's an automatic. I would have that thing burned out by now if it was a stick shift!

Q: You seem to be incredibly busy right now. How do you feel about your workload?

A: I'm happy. I feel like the luckiest person in the world. I get to do so much stuff and I get to do what I love. Sometimes I wish I could get a day off when I don't have to make decisions, but it's about sacrifice, and I get so much other good stuff in return.

Q: What is the weirdest place you have been recognized by a fan?

A: I was sitting on a plane one time coming back from New York and there was this couple. They wrote me a note. They were 40 years old and they just got married and they said, "We really love listening to your music in the car." That's really cool, so that's nice. I think that a big percentage of my fan base is very young, but I'll walk down the street and adults, older teenagers, they're all so supportive.

Dear Dr. Dot,
I can't keep an erection, especially with a condom.
Chris. K
Jersey City

Hey Chris,
My theory is, fluoride is responsible for softies. In the US, there is a lot of fluoride in our drinking water, which gives us nice teeth but makes our men soft down there. In Europe, the men have horrible teeth but are as stiff as a board and can go all night; It must be the water! Try drinking Evian or imported water for a month and try to make your lady orgasm before you even grab for a condom.

Hi Dr.
I need cheap ways to look gorgeous. The competition is stiff here in the city and I am not rich.
Christy,
NYC

Dear Christy

1. If you have those porno-like fake nails, stop getting them, men don't care about them anyways. Do your own pedicure and coat toenails and cuticles with vaseline before showering to make the polish last longer.
2. Forget brand named clothing, jewelry and shoes. It doesn't matter as long as you look clean and polished.
3. Shave, don't get waxed. It saves time and money.
4. Wet and Wild lip liner, nail polish etc is super cheap and no one will know the difference.
5. You can cut corners on everything except your hair, pay for a good colorist, but get a $10 cut at a barber shop.
6. Drink club soda when you go out. It hydrates your skin and only tap water is cheaper.
7. Buy a oil free sun block for your day cream, you don't need any other face cream in the day. For night time, ask your dermatologist for a prescription cream that erases fine lines. Use vaseline around eyes.

The Nightcrawler

By Dave Hoffman

I was going to lead off with the Prince shows, but I've got to start with the Burlesque show at the Slipper Room in Manhattan on Saturday night. I've never been to such a thing before, but guys, if you're willing to put up with a little gayness- in this case a big guy in a bunny suit, Scotty the Bunny- you'll get paid back with a tremendous taste of femininity and sheer sensuality. The girls know how to move. It starts off with some go-go dancing and then moves into dance skits with magic tricks, fun costumes, and feats of skill involving hula hoops. It was a far cry from the usual breast jiggle and gimmie a dollar that you see at a Jersey go go joint. Tipping is appreciated, but not the overriding focus of the performance.

Playful women are the best. From the beginning when the beautiful blond Saturn takes the stage with her disarming smile, knock out figure, and hula hoops you know this night is about fun. Normally, when you see a girl dancing, you get distracted by one or two body parts, but at a show like this, you're reminded throughout the night of every inch of body that she has. And the playfulness- don't underestimate that. I'm telling you.

Hey, it was a totally hot show- I'm not going to describe it. Go see for yourself.

Burlesque Show at The Slipper Room

Speaking of hot, talented, women, it doesn't get much better than Candy Dalfur, blowing her horn for Prince all week at Madison Square Garden and the Continental Arena. With Candy and Maceo Parker on sax, John Blackwell on drums, and Prince on guitar, vocals, and briefly, bass, the region was pretty funky this week. What am I going to tell you that you don't already know? Prince gave the crowd a great mix of songs, virtuosity, and showmanship. He's a perfect guitar player, and I'm sad to have to wait till he comes back. He could already do about six shows of songs he didn't even touch on this tour, almost everything from the 90s on, and he's already got new songs on his website that he recorded after Musicology. On Tuesday, he broke into a groovy, psychedelic version of Whole Lotta Love, complete with a whammy dive into the noise montage middle part. He played some single string percussive thing on the guitar like nothing I've ever heard before, and Prince is one of the only entertainers who can pull that off. If he never plays like that again, we may never hear it again.

Friday, Matt, Selena, and F'n Lou took full advantage of their nosebleed seats by climbing up on the rafters that run across the top of the stadium.

"You know the name of that bar, Lou's Place?" says Lou. "I'm f'n Lou!"

We'll keep that in mind, Lou, but I don't know what it has to do with the Prince concert!

Everyone in the crowd got a free copy of Musicology, and a buddy of mine left his at the TGI Fridays on Route 17 in Woodridge, so whoever picked that up, enjoy it cause it's a good one!

Saturday was the fourth annual Siren Music Festival on Coney Island. It was a great place to see some indie bands- you know, what the kids are listening to these days. It was kind of a cool place to hang out, but I'd take the Jersey shore at any time. There was a bunch of free stuff- CDs, magazines, T-shirts, and pens (hey, I'm a writer, I like free pens). The cool thing about this festival was that I found out there are things to do in New York during the day! The sun was out and everything.

That's all for now, see ya!

Casino Boots Ronstadt for Praising Moore

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Singer Linda Ronstadt not only got booed, she got the boot after praising filmmaker Michael Moore and his new movie "Fahrenheit 9/11" during a performance.

Before singing "Desperado" for an encore Saturday night, Ronstadt called Moore a "great American patriot" and "someone who is spreading the truth." She also encouraged the audience at the Aladdin hotel-casino to see the documentary about President Bush.

Ronstadt's comments drew loud boos, and some of the 4,500 people in attendance stormed out of the theater. People also tore down concert posters and tossed cocktails into the air.

"It was a very ugly scene," Aladdin President Bill Timmins told The Associated Press. "She praised him and all of a sudden all bedlam broke loose."

Timmins, who is British and was watching the show, said he didn't allow Ronstadt back in her luxury suite afterward and she was escorted off the property.

Ronstadt's antics "spoiled a wonderful evening for our guests and we had to do something about it," Timmins said.

Ronstadt, 58, had been booked to play the Aladdin for only one show.

On Monday, Moore released a letter to The Associated Press that he intends to send to Timmins.

"For you to throw Linda Ronstadt off the premises because she dared to say a few words in support of me and my film, is simply stupid and Un-American," Moore wrote.

Calls to Ronstadt's manager were not immediately returned.

VERTIGO BLUE

We've said this before, we'll say it again...yes Vertigo Blue are fronted by the son of Scott The Engineer from The Howard Stern Show. This wouldn't help the band in any way if they weren't able to deliver. Sure, it keeps the name out there and helps them get dates as huge as K-Rock's DFP. Vertigo Blue will soon release their self-titled cd and it's mature and diverse beyond there years. See for yourself next Friday when you can catch them live at the Wreck Room.

the cd is now available at vertigobluemusic.com

New Contest Looks for Best "Guitar Face"

NEW YORK (AP) - The term might not be familiar, but the image definitely is - that look guitarists get when trying to nail a high note or power chord. Now a new contest will determine who has the best "guitar face" and the winner could be someone who has never held a six-string.

"You can hold up a tennis racket, pretend it's a guitar and still enter," said Jesse Raiford, director of programming for the on-demand television service Mag Rack, which is sponsoring the contest. The prize is a Les Paul "Black Beauty" electric guitar and case.

The 20-odd judges range from musicians to producers to rock photographers like Mark Weiss, who has captured everyone from Led Zeppelin to Aerosmith and Ozzy Osbourne in 25 years of taking pictures.

Weiss is looking for someone who reminds him of Ted Nugent. "When he plays his notes, it's emulated in his face. He's all over the place. Look at his mouth and you can tell he's playing the guitar; you don't have to look at his hands."

Gary Lucas understands that well. The Gods and Monsters guitarist said he's been making the guitar face since he was 9 years old.

Everybody can strap on a guitar, but a good guitarist "looks like they should be committed to a mental institution," said Lucas, who started his career in Captain Beefheart and the Magic Band and played with the late Jeff Buckley.

So what will Lucas look for in a winner?

"I'm really looking for someone who can sum it up the most - the most visceral, authentic haunted expression," he said." I'm looking for someone who seems hot-wired into his guitar strings. To me, a guitar is just another extension of a human nervous system."

The contest, which runs through Oct. 31, is promoting Guitar Xpress, a weekly video magazine for guitar aficionados that's available to Cablevision customers.

EDITOR'S NOTE - Aspiring guitar-facers can enter the contest by visiting www.magrack.com or sending a photo no larger than 4 by 6 inches, along with name, address, age and phone number, to Guitar Face Challenge, c/o Cataldi Public Relations, 143 W. 29 St., Suite 904, New York, NY 10001

Steppin' Out,

Just wanted to drop you a note and say thanks to you and Steppin Out for your Musician Billboard ad service. We placed an ad about 5 weeks ago when our classic rock band lost our bass player and lead vocalist. The response we received from the Steppin Out ad was great and better than I hoped for.

Our ad in your magazine produced about 20 responses, much more than a similar ad on an Internet site we placed. In addition the caliber of musicianship was far superior to those on the Internet ad.

End result, got the kind of people we were looking for and should be out gigging again shortly.

Thanks again, and if we find ourselves in need of replacement musicians again you can bet I'll be calling you to help us set up another ad. Keep up the good work!!!!!!

Regards, J.M.

VIDEO GAME REVIEWS

The hottest new games in town!

"The Chronicles of Riddick: Escape From Butcher Bay"

Publisher: Vivendi Universal
System: Microsoft Xbox
Cost: $49.99
Violence Rating: Mature (ages 17 & older)
Review Rating: ★★★★

Butcher Bay Prison is the toughest triple-maximum-security penitentiary in the universe, and it's inescapable. Until now.

You are Riddick, the most dangerous criminal in the galaxy and the anti-hero of this stunning first-person shooter, "The Chronicles of Riddick: Escape From Butcher Bay."

As the same character from the recent movie (although the events in the game occur years before the movie), you are not only super-tough, but you also have a super-bad attitude. Throughout the adventure, you will have to use a wide variety of firearms as well as your bare knuckles to aid you in your daring prison escape.

The game play occasionally switches from all-out explosive shooting action to brutal hand-to-hand fighting matches to dealing with fellow inmates in order to acquire weapons and information.

A strong stealth element allows you to sneak past heavily armed adversaries and offers a fun alternative to simply running and gunning.

"Escape From Butcher Bay" is quite simply the most gorgeous Xbox game to date. The characters look unbelievably lifelike and take real-time damage during fistfights. In addition, the realistic lighting and weapon effects are exceptional, and the main character looks exactly like the movie's star, Vin Diesel, who also did the voice-over.

Even if you don't plan on seeing the movie, don't miss this excellent title. ■
